MCS reaches agreement with teachers association

BY BOB DEMAREE

Madison School Board was presented a tentative agreement for a new contract between the school corporation and the Madison Teachers Association at a special meeting on Tuesday.

The new collective bargaining agreement is expected to be adopted at the next regular school board meeting scheduled for 6 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 10.

"This is the best package that Madison schools has had in many years, if ever," said Madison Superintendent Dr. Jeffrey Studebaker. Studebaker noted the contract addresses a salary compression issue — a situation where newer teachers are paid close to or more than experienced colleagues — that has existed for about a decade.

He said the compression began showing up in school districts throughout Indiana approximately 10 years ago when the state legislature permitted newly hired teachers to negotiate pay at the time of their hiring. Since then, more performance evaluation standards have been established.

"This has been a two-year process to get his done," said Studebaker, who noted it addresses issues where some teachers were not "paid as well as they should have been because of the compression issue."

American Legion open to public on Friday nights

CHARLIE ROHLFING
CHARLIE'S BEAT

First, before I get to this week's story about music at the American Legion, I want to catch you up on an exciting upcoming show. Chuck Prophet and the Mission Express are coming to Red Bicycle Hall next Wednesday, Nov. 10. It's a 7 p.m. show so you'll have plenty of time to catch the performance and still get home on a school night.

It's impossible to overstate how truly influential this singer-songwriter is. We don't often get original talent of this caliber playing in our little town. Even our resident Grammy-winning musician Robert Reynolds describes Chuck Prophet as "pure Rock & Roll bliss!" Tickets are available at RedBicycleHall.com.

Crisafullis honored for preservation

Project breathed new life into burned Elks Lodge building

BY BOB DEMAREE

Severely damaged by fire in 2006, the former Elks Lodge building in downtown Madison was brought back to life by Valecia and Larry Crisafulli, who have turned it into seven market-rate housing units.

On Tuesday, the Indiana Historic Preservation Award was presented to the Crisafullis and their PlaceWorks LLC, for outstanding Rehabilitation Tax Credit Project on the former Elks building at 420 West Street.

"I wanted to give you guys an award because this building was in a state that it easily could have been demolished, and I feel you went above and beyond to restore it," said Ashley Thomas, tax credit administrator for the Historic Preservation and Archaeology Division of the Department of Natural Resources. "You did an excellent job and I just feel that needs to be recognized."

The Elks building, a two-story Beaux Arts Neoclassical style fraternal lodge, was built in 1904. The Aug. 25, 2006 fire resulted in the loss of the roof and many of the windows, making rehabilitation of the property even more challenging. Progress on the gutted structure had stalled for many years until the Crisafullis took on the project.

"Everybody gathered here has preservation in their hearts," said Valecia Crisafulli, expressing appreciation to everyone who supported the rehabilitation. "This is not done without the great city participation," she said. "Thank you so much for seeing the value in this place."

Valecia said they had two goals in rehabilitating the former Elks Lodge. "One was to prove that ordinary people can do small-scale tax credit projects. This isn't just for big complicated, multi-layered operations. We really appreciate all the support we got for that. But the second, even more important than that, was to create great spaces for people who want to live downtown because Larry is a visionary on this, and he's always said we want spaces where we would want to live, where everybody would want to live. So that was our goal to get more people down here supporting our shops

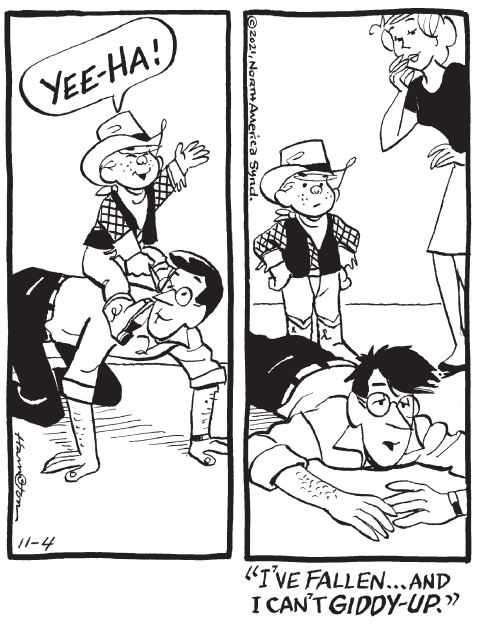
DENNIS THE MENACE



My dream guy is missing his front teeth

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I was in a relationship for about 18 years. Early on, he proposed, and I declined with no intention of ever remarrying. After a little bit of cool-off time, the relationship slowly started up again despite this difference.

Over those years, some of our individual friends became mutual friends. Invitations for events were, of course, extended to us as a couple or individually with a plus one.

Over the past two years, the relationship ended. Soon after, I accepted a date with someone I loosely knew who is not local to the area where I live. This relationship quickly grew into an exclusive relationship. We are considering marriage in the near future, likely about one or two years off.

After the dissolution of the past relationship, I started getting invitations for "one," no guest, from the now-mutual friends. My ex also gets invited. Originally, some of the statements were that there was concern that he would behave poorly if I was there with my new significant other. I have told inviters to please not extend this type of invitation to me as I do not consider it a real invitation. It's disrespectful to my current boyfriend to expect him to be OK not being welcome to attend an event with me when my ex would be there.

Can you please weigh in on this type of invitation and how I can get people to understand this is not OK? — Moved On But Feeling the Pushback From Friends

Dear Moved On: It's common for friends to feel caught in the middle after a breakup — especially the breakup of an 18-year relationship. However, you're all adults here. There's no reason for your new boyfriend to be disinvited from social events. If your ex isn't comfortable being around you two, he can stay home.

I would explain to your friends that your new beau is the real deal and that you see a future with him. If he's not welcome at their dinner parties or barbecues, then they'll be missing out on your attendance, too.

Dear Annie: Five months ago, I started dating a 58-year-old man. We met online and exchanged phone numbers. Our conversations were great, so we met for a date and started a relationship.

Well, he did not mention during our conversations that he is missing his front teeth. None of his pictures online showed this either. He claimed that he would get implants or dentures. He has done neither.

I am not shallow, but I am 52 and don't want to be seen with a toothless man. Dental procedures are expensive, and he does not have dental insurance. I told him I am not comfortable being in a relationship with a man who does not care about his dental health. He smiles and laughs like it is a good look. What do you think about this toothless situation? — Not Asking for Much

Dear Not Asking: I wouldn't call you shallow for wanting a boyfriend with front teeth. Tell him how handsome his smile is and how much it could be improved by a set of pearly whites.

His jolly attitude is heartwarming, and you might want to take a page out of his book while the two of you save up for dental implants. After all, if this is your biggest relationship problem, you have it pretty good.

Weary widow worries for husband's health

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I'm in my 70s, as is my boyfriend. For the most part, we get along. But lately, I'm starting to worry about him. He lost his fiancee about five years ago, and I lost my husband six years ago, so we both know grief.

He still buys things for his fiancee, which I think is strange. I asked him about it, and he said, "She always liked this picture, so I bought it for her." Little strange, I think. He texts her phone number when he's down. I told him he can always talk to me, but he says he likes talking to her. He also says he loves me but it's a different kind of love. What does that mean? Please give me some advice in dealing with this. — Confused

Dear Confused: Grief is a funny thing. It has no set timeline, and it manifests itself differently in everyone. It sounds like your boyfriend is stuck, though, and could use some professional help. He needs to process and accept his loss.

Attend couples counseling so that he can address his attachment to his late fiancee and start building a future with you.

Dear Annie: I love my husband of 25 years dearly. He's a hard worker, great provider, and great husband and father to our children.

He has health issues, though. He had a massive heart attack a couple years ago and thinks that because they stented it and he's on meds, he's good to go.

He doesn't worry about what he eats and doesn't do any regular exercise. Both of his parents had heart issues and have since passed. He's 56 years old and won't get a colonoscopy even though his father had colon cancer.

I have stopped arguing with him about it and have told him I'm preparing myself to become a widow with children because he is not proactive with his health. He thinks I'm being mean and picking fights when I only care and want him to live a long and healthy life.

He only reacts or seeks help when something bad happens. I am completely the opposite and am raising my kids to be proactive with their health as well. I don't know what else to do. Please help! And asking him to talk to a counselor or psychologist is like talking to the wall! — Widow in the Making

Dear Widow: At 56, your husband has so many beautiful moments and wonderful experiences to look forward to — birthdays, anniversaries, retirement, weddings, grandchildren — experiences that his parents unfortunately may not have seen due to their own health.

Instead of arguing or explaining your perspective, try to help him understand his own. The only way to take part in these milestones is to be here for them, and a reactive approach to personal health won't cut it.

We can't help people who don't want to help themselves, but the load often feels lighter when we shoulder it with someone else.

You're already teaching your kids how to take care of themselves; try to tackle healthier eating and regular exercise altogether as a family. Incorporating better habits little by little into everyday routines may help your husband realize how much better he feels when he takes care of himself and how much life he has left to live.

and restaurants and our great Main Street, and you all know that's what it takes."

She specifically expressed appreciation to John Staicer, president and executive director of Historic Madison Inc., for his support, along with Bill Barnes, president and chief executive officer of the Community Foundation of Madison and Jefferson County, for being a "great neighbor" with the foundation's offices next door at 416 West Street.

Attendees at the award presentation were able to tour three of the units in the building.

Efforts were made to restore many historical features including replicating the original windows.

Larry Crisafulli talked about some artifacts that were salvaged from the fire including burned timbers now on display in a hallway. "We didn't want to throw them out so we stuck them somewhere we could display them," he said. One window that survived the fire is also now displayed.

"Each year we look at preservation projects that have been completed across the state," said Beth McCord, director of the Historic Preservation and Archaeology Division. "This is one that definitely deserved recognition. This is an example of the great things with the tax credit that can be accomplished without being a large corporation" and what can be done by individuals who take on challenging restoration projects.

"The way this one turned out is outstanding," she said, noting that in spite of a devastating fire, "this building now has life again."

Mayor Bob Courtney praised the Crisafulli's Elks restoration at Tuesday's Madison City Council, noting how it is just part of Madison's overall focus on historic preservation.

"Not only has Madison been on the map for a very long time but it continues to stay on the map and stay relevant and lead the way across the state. And honestly across the nation in regards to the preservation effort," Courtney said. "Thank you for your investment, too, because it drives our economy, and preservation really is key to our future.

"We like to say Madison is a small town with an historic future and we still firmly believe that," Courtney added. "We are definitely one of a kind."

Fife honored for her role in historic preservation

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Local preservation specialist Camille Fife was honored with a Lifetime Achievement Award by the Department of Resources Division of Historic Preservation and Archaeology at Tuesday's Madison City Council meeting.

Camille Fife

"This is really quite amazing to me," Fife said while accepting the award. "When they first said I was going to get this award I didn't quite know what to think, but you know something we are in one of the most marvelous towns. One of the most exciting towns. People all over the country are jealous of us because the place we live is not only beautiful but it's dedicated to defining our future by our past."

Fife was presented the award by Paul Diebold, assistant director of preservation services for the Division of Historic Preservation and Archaeology. He noted Fife is a familar name among history, heritage and preservation enthusiasts in Indiana.

A former preservation planner for the City of Madison, Fife worked 35 years a professional preservationalist in various communities. She now works as a historian for the Madison-Jefferson County Public Library.

Even though Fife lives in Madison, she has written or co-authored 26 National Register of Historic Places nominations, in 19 different Indiana counties of which 13 were applications for historic districts.

Fife was also the primary researcher for Madison's National Historic Landmark designation, which provided more than 1,600 historic buildings with the United States' highest preservation honor. She's written complex landscape reports for Leeper Park in South Bend and Garfield Park in Indianapolis. During the more than 30 years of her practice, she has also documented historic places in Ohio and South Dakota, including reports on the James A. Garfield and William Howard Taft national historic sites.

In the late 1970s, she served as vice-president for public relations for Historic New Harmony. Since then she has been an active contributor and advocate for Indiana's cultural resources and historic preservation movement. She was the founding executive director of Mary Anderson Center for the Arts at Mount St. Francis in Farmersburg. In 1982, she and her husband, Thomas Salmon, established a preservation consulting firm called The Westerly Group. With Salmon as landscape architect and draftsman, and Fife as president and historian, The Westerly Group took on numerous documentation projects and National Register nominations.

cases, an increase of six since Friday. Switzerland County's positivity rate is 8.9%.

The county's positivity rate is currently 5.65%. Trimble County has seen 17 deaths in 1,252 total cases, an increase of 21 since Friday. The current positivity rate in 13.04%.

MCS

Jodi Yancey, president of the school board, noted another issue in contract negotiations is the state requirement that the minimum teacher salary will be $40,000 while Madison Consolidated Schools' minimum is currently at $37,000.

Additionally, Studebacker said the state also now requires 45% of the school corporation's education fund must be used for full-time teacher salaries.

The plan proposed Tuesday also includes MCS paying a 2% premium increase on health insurance, which amounts to approximately a 0.4% raise overall.

Teachers will see the following pay increases:

- Base pay average 6.3% ranging from 1.5% to 19.25%.
- Base pay average is $2,947 ranging from $822 to $7,200.
- Stipend average of 1% ranging from 0.0% to 4.57%.
- Stipend average of $2 ranging from 0 to $2,178.
- Total base, stipend and health insurance is 7.6%.
- Total base, stipend and health insurance is $615,654.

A new placement scale was created to help resolve compression and will be used as a mirror scale for new hires. Teacher increases have been calculated by:

- Placing existing new teachers on the new placement scale.
- If existing placement did not result in a minimum 1.5% base increase, 1.5% was added to the base.
- If existing teacher placement did not result in a minimum of $3,000, the difference was calculated as a stipend for teachers with years of experience 0-20.
- Existing teachers with experience of 21 years or more will receive base increase of $2,250. If existing teacher placement did not result in a minimum of $3,500, the difference was calculated as a stipend for teachers with years of experience over 21 or more.

On another note, I want to do a little mini-review for a show I saw last Friday at Mad Paddle. The house band madESSENCE played to a packed house and the energy was electric, to say the least. The addition of Brent & Catherine Sallie Evans has really added a spark. And when someone in the crowd shouted "Play Freebird" late in the final set, they absolutely did. They rocked the place down to the ground! Keep an eye out for their next show on Nov. 27.

Now, on to the Legion. I wanted to do a story about what I call the "Club Shows" that are a fairly significant part of our weekly music calendar. The American Legion, The Moose, The VFW and The Elks are all opening their doors to the public on various nights and hosting live music.

These venues are classic slices of vintage Americana, back when these social and veteran clubs ruled the social scene. They are cozy, clubby, friendly, and they are smoky (except for the Elks.) Most nights they are members only. But if I list them on the weekly music calendar, they are open to the public.

"I'm hoping the music on Fridays will encourage more people to come and discover what we offer here," says Gina Copeland, bar manager at American Legion Post 9. "People can come in and enjoy our bar and music, and even participate in the big Treasure Hunt drawings we do on Fridays. The drawing jackpot is close to $7,000 right now, but it's been as high as $150,000 in the past.

AMERICAN LEGION BAR MANAGER GINA COPELAND

"Most of the bands we book are southern rock, classic rock, and straight country. But we've had Edgar Red before, which is pretty hard rock. And we have a band called Paradigm coming up next Friday, the 12th, that I'm very excited about.

"You know, I've been around the Madison music scene pretty much my whole life. My first bartender job was at the Electric Lady, and then the 3G when Cheryl & Steve Chucky owned it. "I did some time at the Crown Room, too. It seems like there's live music everywhere now. And I'm just glad the Legion can be a part of that energy, and maybe pick up some new members while we're at it."

If you want to check out the music at the American Legion, the general public is welcome every Friday, as noted in the calendar. And if you're the kind who likes a little smokin' with their drinkin' and dancin', you'll fit right in!

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK

What the heck is "Patriotic Karaoke" at the Central on Thursday night? I don't know. Should you go there and find out? Yes you should! If you haven't seen the duo Joe Perkinson and Deano Crafton yet, you have three opportunities this week —Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Do yourself a favor and check them out. It's this kind of feel good popular music show that just makes you want to smile and sing along. Tell them Charlie sent you!

MADISON COURIER GIRLS SOCCER PLAYER OF THE YEAR

Kappes perfect role model for talented young Pacers

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Switzerland County featured one of the youngest girls soccer teams in the state this year, with eight freshmen and sophomores playing in the starting lineup throughout the season.

But in the middle of all that youth stood a senior who helped meld that talent into a top 15 force, a blur of athleticism and flowing red hair that dazzled opponents and led the Pacers to 14 wins and a first-ever sectional championship.

A leader on and off the field, Raylinn Kappes was exactly the catalyst Switzerland needed to get over its championship hump and, as it turned out, the easy choice for this year's Madison Courier Girls Soccer Player of the Year.

"I feel like I did pretty good this year. I couldn't have done it without my teammates and they've always been there for me and helped me," Kappes said. "I did a lot better than last year and I felt like I shot a lot more this year. Last year, I wasn't really worried that much about shooting but this year, if I had a shot, I just took it and sometimes they didn't go in and I guess sometimes they did."

Kappes' shots went into the net more than any other player in the area. Her 23 goals were five more than the next-closest athlete on the list, but she also dished out 13 assists — just one off the area lead.

Nina Campbell

Switzerland County senior Raylinn Kappes is the Madison Courier Girls Soccer Player of the Year.

But it was more than just her play that made Kappes stand out. Always cheerful, smiling and upbeat, she set the standard for a Switzerland team that is still trying to grow into its role as a blossoming powerhouse.

"She's very well-rounded. She's got very great character. She's very well-mannered and she's just nice on and off the field," Switzerland coach Courtney Dayadharum said. "Kids love to play with her. I love to have her. I think she's going to do big things at the next level."

Dayadharum has watched Kappes grow up as one of the first members of the Switzerland County's youth soccer program. After watching her from the sidelines for nearly 15 years, she knows Kappes is something special.

"She's the first one from our SAY program to graduate. The first true product of our youth program," Dayadharum said. "I hate to see her leave but it's been a great career."

Kappes is the third-straight Lady Pacer to take home the Courier's Player of the Year award, joining Matty Anderson in 2019 and freshman Halle Archer last year. Archer, now a sophomore, could have easily repeated as award winner this year after scoring 18 goals and dishing out 14 assists, as could classmate Kenzie Taylor who had 15 goals and 10 assists.

Kappes, Archer and Taylor formed a trio that was hard to stop and the three quickly grew into close friends.

"With me, Halle and Kenzie, we've always had like that connection together. And I've always played on the right, Kenzie is in the center and Halle is on the left," Kappes said. "We heard this thing on the radio. Someone called us the 'big three.' So then we started calling each other that and I just loved playing with them so much. We also play club together so I can't wait to play again this spring."

"They definitely have the chemistry working together," Dayadharum said.

Kappes is also a standout track athlete, qualifying for the regional in four events last year, but soccer is her game. She has committed to NCAA Division II St. Francis and will head off to the northern Indiana school next fall.

"It is a really good program and I really liked the coach there," Kappes said. "I can't wait."

While she will miss Switzerland County, Kappes can't wait to see how her Pacers teammates build on their special 2021 season. Although she won't be on the field with them, she will be cheering them from afar.

"I'm gonna miss playing with my girls. I've always loved playing with them and we just grew these bonds together and we just know how each other think," Kappes said. "It's gonna be hard to adjust to a new team, but I know they are going to do great."

Panther men picked first in HCAC; women second

A pair of former Madison Cub teammates will square off in a men's college basketball scrimmage when Hanover College welcomes Indiana-Southeast to Collier Arena at 7 p.m. on Friday for the Midwest Tube Mills River Rumble.

Freshmen Luke Miller (Hanover) and Nick Center (IUS) will get a chance to face off on opposite teams in the matchup. The pair helped guide Madison to 17 wins last season, the program's best performance in more than a decade.

Game admission is free for all individuals and should feature two of the best men's small college teams in the state.

Hanover recently finished tied with Anderson for first place in the Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference preseason coach's poll. Both teams received 81 total points with Anderson named on four first-place ballots to just one for Hanover.

Transylvania was third with 78 points and two first place votes followed by Rose-Hulman (75 points and two first place ballots) and Franklin with (67 points and one first place vote).

Over the past 12 seasons, coach Jon Miller's Panthers have posted a 120-50 overall record with three regular-season HCAC crowns. The Panthers landed three players on the league's Players to Watch list in seniors Isaac Hibbard and Noah Williams, and junior Ty Houston.

The Hanover women, under sixth-year head coach John Jones, were picked to finish second in the HCAC poll with 86 points and two first-place votes. Transylvania, with 95 total points and six first-place votes, finished first.

Mount St. Joseph was third with 70 points and one first place vote and was followed by Franklin, with 66 points and the final first place nod.

Seniors Lanette Blume and Liz Tynan were both listed as Players to Watch by the league.

Hanover's men open the 2021-22 regular season on Tuesday at Wabash and then head to Boyce on Friday, Nov. 12. The Panthers play an exhibition at Indiana State on Sunday, Nov. 14, before making their regular-season home debut on Wednesday, Nov. 17 against Spalding.

The Hanover women open the season at Elmhurst on Friday, Nov. 12 and don't make their home debut until Sunday, Nov. 28, when they host Centre.

Prosecutor: Ruggs driving over 150 mph before crash

BY KEN RITTER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Former Raiders wide receiver Henry Ruggs III was driving at more than 150 mph with a blood-alcohol content twice Nevada's legal limit before his sports car slammed into the rear of a vehicle that burned, killing a 23-year-old woman, a prosecutor said Wednesday.

The Raiders released Ruggs late Tuesday, just hours after the crash, his hospitalization and his booking into a Las Vegas jail. He had his initial court appearance Wednesday on felony charges of driving under the influence of alcohol resulting in death and reckless driving that could get him up to 26 years in state prison if he is convicted.

Ruggs, 22, appearing with his attorneys, David Chesnoff and Richard Schonfeld, was not asked to enter a plea to the charges, pending the formal filing of charges by Clark County District Attorney Steve Wolfson.

The name of the Las Vegas woman who died in the wrecked and burned Toyota Rav4 with her dog was not immediately made public.

Las Vegas police have identified Ruggs' passenger as Kiara Je'nai Kilgo-Washington, 22, of Las Vegas.

Ruggs and Kilgo-Washington were hospitalized with unspecified injuries that police said did not appear life-threatening after the Chevrolet Corvette he was driving slammed into the Toyota at about 3:40 a.m. Tuesday.

Ruggs owns a $1.1 million home not far from where the crash occurred, according to property records.

Prosecutor Eric Bauman said air bag computer records showed the Corvette decelerated from 156 mph (251 kph) to 127 mph (204 kph) before it struck the Toyota.

Judge Joe M. Bonaventure said moments later he could not recall a speed that high involved in a crash case since he became a judge. Nevertheless, the judge rejected Bauman's request for $1 million bail and set bail, at Chesnoff's request, at $150,000 with strict conditions, including home confinement, electronic monitoring, no alcohol, no driving and surrender of Ruggs' passport.

Hammerin' Braves rout Astros to win 1st WS crown since '95

BY BEN WALKER
AP BASEBALL WRITER

HOUSTON — Most of the season, it just seemed this wasn't their year.

They dropped their first four games, and soon injuries piled up. They lost their most dynamic player before the All-Star break. They were stuck below .500 in August.

Yet out of nowhere, suddenly, these Atlanta Braves transformed themselves and took off.

Jorge Soler, Freddie Freeman and the Braves breezed to their first World Series championship since 1995, hammering the Houston Astros 7-0 on Tuesday night in Game 6. Max Fried threw six dominant innings in a signature pitching performance to close it out.

"We hit every pothole, every bump you could possibly hit this year," Freeman said. "Injuries, every single kind of thing that could happen, that could go wrong went wrong, and we overcame every single one of those things."

How proud Hank Aaron would've been.

Even so, Atlanta's troubles never fully went away.

General manager Alex Anthopoulos, the architect of the Braves' midseason turnaround, missed this crowning achievement after testing positive for COVID-19. He was back home for the clincher.

Soler, a July acquisition who tested positive for the coronavirus in the playoffs, backed Fried early with a monster three-run shot for his third homer against the Astros.

Freeman hit an RBI double and then punctuated the romp with a solo home run in the seventh that made it 7-0.

By then, it was a total team effort. Ailing star Ronald Acuña Jr., the dynamo of Atlanta's future, bounded from the dugout to join the celebration for Freeman, the longtime face of the franchise.

When Yuli Gurriel grounded out to end it, Freeman caught the

Pacers snap 4-game losing streak, rout Spurs, 131-118

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana Pacers coach Rick Carlisle spent the first two weeks plugging holes.

On Monday night, he finally found some answers.

Domantas Sabonis finished with 24 points and 13 rebounds and Myles Turner added 19 points to lead the Indiana Pacers past struggling San Antonio 131-118 on Monday night.

It was a welcome change for the Pacers, who snapped a four-game losing streak and won for just the second time in eight games under Carlisle.

"I thought this was the kind of game we needed, the type of game we need to play," Carlisle said. "I would like not to give up 118 points, but we need to embrace this and keep working to get better."

Dejounte Murray finished with 16 points and Devin Vassell had 15 to lead San Antonio. The Spurs have lost four of their last five with the only win coming Saturday at defending NBA champion Milwaukee.

But after the opening minutes in Indianapolis, the Spurs never had a chance and coach Greg Popovich was upset his team didn't put forth a better effort.

"Our worst game of the year," he said.

Indiana opened the game by going 8 of 10 from 3-point range and taking a 43-31 lead after one quarter. Then, unlike their previous games, the Pacers continued accelerating. By halftime, the Pacers extended the margin to 78-56 and had five players in double figures.

San Antonio couldn't get closer than 18 until the final few minutes in its most lopsided loss this season.

"We won the third quarter and we hadn't done that all year," Carlisle said. "I feel good about this one but we certainly can't exhale with New York coming in here."

TIP-INS

Spurs: Derrick White had 13 points and seven assists while Jakob Poeltl had 11 points six rebounds. ... Murray had six assists and four players scored 10 points. ... San Antonio played without forward-center Zach Collins (ankle) and former Pacers guard Doug McDermott (knee). ... The Spurs had won their last two games in Indy, but have lost four straight in San Antonio.

Pacers: Despite being without guards Malcolm Brogdon (hamstring), Jeremy Lamb (sprained ankle) and forwards T.J. Warren (foot) and Isaiah Jackson (knee), Indiana still posted season-high scoring totals in the first quarter, first half and third quarter (31). ... Turner had eight rebounds and Sabonis had six assists. ... Carlisle is now tied with Nate McMillan (183) for the third-most wins in the franchise's NBA era. Carlisle won 181 games in his first head coaching stint with the Pacers. ... Twenty-five service members were sworn into office at halftime of the game.

Colts keep focus on same goals despite AFC South deficit

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Colts should be adjusting their expectations.

They trail division-leading Tennessee by three games and the gap essentially expands to four when factoring in the Titans season sweep. It's a wide margin after eight weeks, even in a 17-game season — and even if two-time NFL rushing champ Derrick Henry doesn't take another snap with Tennessee this season.

Coach Frank Reich refuses to cede anything.

"I understand it's a really big hole to come back from and win the division, the odds are really stacked against us," he said after Sunday's 34-31 overtime loss put Indy in this predicament. "I'm just not wired to think like that. The way I'm wired, the way our team is wired is we've got a game on Thursday night. We have to come back."

A short week should help Indy move on quickly after seeing another winnable game slip away, this one with potentially long-term consequences.

With five losses, three at home, the Colts now face a daunting task to get back into division title contention.

While wins over the New York Jets (2-5) this week and Jacksonville (1-6) next week would get the Colts to .500 for the first time this season, the ensuing six-game stretch poses a major challenge. It includes trips to Buffalo and Arizona with home games sprinkled in against Tampa Bay, New England and Las Vegas.

So even navigating the more manageable journey to one of the AFC's seven playoff spots would require Indy to beat some playoff contenders. And, regardless of Henry's injury status, the Colts can't afford many more stumbles.

Yes, it's a difficult task, one they've accepted with the same unrelenting approach of Reich.

"Football's funny. You practice hard, you put in the work and sometimes it's just not working out," tight end Jack Doyle said Monday. "You know the process works, you know how we do things here. So you dig deeper into that and you keep working and you know that the ball will start bouncing our way in those games."

WHAT'S WORKING

Deep throws. Carson Wentz has taken more downfield shots the last two weeks and Michael Pittman Jr. is making plays. Even when receivers don't catch passes, they're getting behind defenders and drawing penalties.

WHAT NEEDS HELP

Finishing games. Indy led 14-0 midway through the first quarter, but instead of extending the margin and closing it out, they let the Titans charge back. It's the second time in four weeks Indy has squandered a late lead.

Bengals' momentum halted ahead of matchup with Browns

BY MITCH STACY

CINCINNATI — Maybe the Cincinnati Bengals spent a little too much time patting themselves on the back after blowing out the Ravens.

Maybe they were looking ahead to the important division matchup with the Browns.

Maybe they thought the New York Jets wouldn't put up much of a fight.

Whatever the reason, the previously one-win Jets brought the Bengals' momentum to an abrupt halt with a 34-31 upset Sunday, a head-scratching underperformance for a Cincinnati team that came in at 5-2 and seemed to be displaying the look of a playoff contender.

"This was always in the back of your mind coming off a (41-17) win against Baltimore, and we spent a lot of time making sure that we were focused," Cincinnati coach Zac Taylor said. "Because I was looking for any warning signs that this would appear during the week, and I didn't see any.

Now with four games remaining against AFC North rivals, and the Raiders, Chargers and Chiefs also on the schedule, the Bengals have raised the same old doubts over whether they can be consistent enough to remain relevant throughout the regular season.

"The NFL season is like a wave, you're going to ride it up and down," receiver Tee Higgins said Monday. "You just have to be able to stay on that board and just keep going."

Against the Jets, the Bengals defense played its worst game so far. They allowed 511 yards to the league's worst offense, including 405 yards and three touchdowns to Jets backup quarterback Mike White in his first career start. Cincinnati was unable to hold a two-score lead in the fourth quarter.

Head-scratching, indeed.

"It still doesn't seem real, but it happened," defensive end Sam Hubbard said.

WHAT'S WORKING

The Bengals are still moving the ball and scoring behind quarterback Joe Burrow, who was 21 for 34 for 259 yards and three touchdowns. He's third in the NFL in touchdowns (20) and fifth in passing yards (2,215).

WHAT NEEDS HELP

The Cincinnati defense came in as the 10th-best in the league and had been sharp in recent weeks. Against the Jets, the Bengals had several missed tackles that allowed New York to go on long drives. White picked apart the linebackers with intermediate passes. The Bengals just couldn't stop the Jets when it mattered most.

STOCK UP

Higgins, a second-year receiver who has been overshadowed by rookie Ja'Marr Chase this season, had four catches for 97 yards. He had catches of 26 yards and one for 54 yards, both of which set up Cincinnati touchdowns.

BRAVES

throw at first base, put the ball in his pocket, and the party was on for manager Brian Snitker's club.

A full hour after the game, hundreds of Braves fans packed behind the team's third base dugout kept doing the chop and chant, causing loud echoes to bounce around the ballpark.

About 700 miles away at suburban Truist Park, thousands of fans poured into the Braves' home to holler.

A mere afterthought in the summer heat among the land of the Giants, White Sox and Dodgers, but magnificent in the Fall Classic.

"This is the toughest team I've ever been a part of," said shortstop Dansby Swanson, who also homered.

Soler tapped his heart twice before beginning his home run trot after connecting off rookie Luis Garcia in the third inning, sending the ball flying completely out of Minute Maid Park and clinching the Series MVP award.

By the end, nothing could stop them. Not a broken leg sustained by starter Charlie Morton in the World Series opener. Not a big blown lead in Game 5.

Steadied by the 66-year-old Snitker, an organization man for four decades, the underdog Braves won the franchise's fourth title.

"They never gave up on themselves," he said on a postgame victory platform. "We lost a lot of pieces over the course of the summer and it was just the next man up."

Consider it a tribute to the greatest Braves player of them all. Aaron died Jan. 22 at 86, still pulling for his old team, and The Hammer's legacy was stamped all over this Series.

"Nobody ever wanted to let Hank down," Snitker said. "That's just the way it was, we didn't want to let him down. He charged us with a responsibility to make these guys better and we weren't going to let him down."

And note the Braves outhomered the top-scoring team in the majors by 11-2.

For 72-year-old Houston manager Dusty Baker, a disappointment. But for many fans rooting against the Astros in the wake of their 2017 sign-stealing scandal, some satisfaction.

"Yeah, it's tough, but you know something? You've got to keep on trucking, and that gives you even more incentive next year," Baker said.

"It's tough to take now, but this too shall pass. I mean, it really hurts, but it's over," he added.

Major credit for Atlanta's title goes to Anthopoulos. Undaunted by Acuña's knee injury, he pulled off a flurry of July trades that brought the Fab Four to an entirely retooled outfield — NL Championship Series MVP Eddie Rosario, Adam Duvall, Joc Pederson and Soler.

"Thanks to God for the opportunity to be on this team," Soler said through a translator.

But even in the Analytics Era, guided by a GM fully versed in new-age ways, the path these Braves took wouldn't add up in any computer. Especially with how things looked in midseason.

"At that time, we were searching," third baseman Austin Riley said before Game 6. "I think there's no question about that."

Minus Acuña, Atlanta wasn't over .500 for a single day until the first week in August. The Braves finished 88-73 for the 12th-best record in the majors and fewest victories among playoff teams; their win total was the lowest for a World Series champion since St. Louis' 83 in 2006.

Plus, some agonizing history in Atlanta, a city where no team had won a title in the four major pro sports besides 1995.

The Braves couldn't convert a 3-1 series advantage over the Dodgers in the NLCS last year. The Hawks fell short in the Eastern Conference finals last season. And then there was the big one, the Falcons blowing a 28-3 lead to the Patriots in the Super Bowl.

But these Braves, not this time.
